

Introduction

MOCA, formerly known as OSFAM (Offshore Structural Fabricators Association of Malaysia), is an association of offshore contracting companies serving the oil and gas industries in Malaysia.

The association was first incepted in February 1990 by a group of major offshore fabrication companies having interests in engineering, procurement and fabrication of offshore platforms. The main objective of the association at that time was for personnel of the companies to network among themselves as well as with related trade associations, government agencies and the customers for specific functions in the course of doing their works. The associated was an elite and exclusive club for owners of fabrication yards.

In March 2012, the association has formally obtained approval from the authority (ie ROS) to change name and expand its membership to also include companies providing contracting services for offshore works in Malaysian waters. Good-standing companies that have the capability (in term of manpower, infra-structure and capital) of carrying out 1st tier EPCIC works can participate as the full members of the association. Other companies providing related services but could not meet the prerequisite to become full member of the association can also participate in the association as associate members.
